Call for Submissions on Child Literacy and Social Inclusion

The National Economic and Social Forum (NESF) has been asked by the Government to focus on the Irish experience of successful and unsuccessful implementation of official policies. As part of this, an NESF Project Team, chaired by Professor Áine Hyland, has been set up to examine policies on child literacy and social inclusion.

Have you information and stories to share with the Project Team?

We would like to know more about your experiences of child literacy initiatives in primary schools and communities experiencing social exclusion. We are particularly interested in hearing from teachers, support teachers, principals, parents and members of the community.

Submissions to the Project Team can be made by way of a letter, email, phone call or a short report. For more information or how to make a submission, please contact:
